Hey, sleeping bag owner! Hola, ciao, salut, hallo!

After each night's use, hang your sleeping bag outdoors to air for a while. You can tie these two drying hoops on a line.

Also remember a really good airing once you return from your adventure! Removing condensation gives your sleeping bag a long life. This is normally better than washing.

Good care saves a lot of water and detergent, and keeps your sleeping bag in good shape for longer.

It's also best to store your sleeping bag outside of the stuff sack in between expeditions!

If you want to wash this sleeping bag as well as the sleeping bag liner inside, here's what you need to know.

The outer material is made from a super robust 380T ripstop nylon, the inside from a soft, breathable 190T polyester and the filling is lightweight hollowfibre polyester.

It is simple to wash your sleeping bag on a 40 degree, low spin cycle.

If it's sub-zero temperatures you can hang your sleeping bag outdoors overnight - this kills bed mites.

If you're unsure what the pictograms below mean, you can search "laundry symbols" online!
